

Summary

I am a Ph.D. quantitative researcher in macro-finance, fluent in Chinese Mandarin, English and French. I work for ADIA, the sovereign wealth fund of Abu Dhabi.

I am part of ADIA's quant team ("Q"). I work both on multi-assets allocation and portfolio construction, as well as on alpha generation for systematic trading.

I use alternative and standard data, statistics (frequentist and Bayesian), and machine learning, mostly in the time series space. I develop Python tools for macro-financial signals generation and portfolio construction.

I combine technical skills in modeling, programming, and finance with a 10-year international macro-financial experience with the International Monetary Fund and the European Central Bank.

I also design open-source statistical models and algorithms, available on romainlafarguette.github.io/.
Note that, since I joined ADIA, I am not allowed to release my new codes online but I am still very active.
